Dr Danny Chambers MP

An MP and a Campaigner with a record of ACTION

A hardworking MP

As the MP for Winchester, and Party Mental Health Spokesperson, I've worked hard to listen to people and get things done. I've prioritised doing casework, already helping my constituents with over 11,000 cases. I'm actually getting things done in Parliament; I introduced the Puppy Smuggling Bill—major animal welfare legislation that cracks down on the illegal import of mutilated animals—which passed the House of Commons on the first anniversary of my election.

Modernising our party

I want to help modernise how we select our candidates to make our party even more successful. We've already achieved so much together, but I know we can go further if we make our processes more open, efficient, and forward-looking. As someone who has been through Parliamentary candidate selection and successfully won a seat, I've seen how making this process more efficient could make a real difference.

Beyond Westminster

I'm not just a politician, I've worked as a vet in and around Winchester. I've served as a trustee for two charities, and was elected by my peers to the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons body that governs the veterinary profession. I was involved in charitable projects around the world. My written works have also been published in the magazine New Scientist.
